Cimba Richard Maury was born in 1926 in the small town of Camden, New Jersey. His father was a successful businessman and his mother was a stay-at-home mom. Maury had a happy childhood and was a good student. He graduated from high school in 1944 and went on to college, where he studied business. After graduating from college, Maury went to work for his father's company. He was a hard worker and quickly rose through the ranks. By the time he was 30 years old, he was the president of the company.

In 1955, Maury married his college sweetheart, Nancy. They had two children, a son and a daughter. Maury was a loving husband and father. He was also a successful businessman. He was the president of his father's company and he was also involved in several other business ventures. He was a well-respected member of his community and he was considered to be a role model for other young men.

In 1965, Maury's life was forever changed by the death of his son. His son was killed in a car accident. Maury was devastated by his son's death. He could not believe that his son was gone. He went into a deep depression and he stopped going to work. He also stopped taking care of himself. He lost weight and he started drinking heavily.

Maury's wife and daughter tried to help him, but he refused to get help. He became increasingly withdrawn and he started to talk to himself. He also started to have strange beliefs. He believed that he was being followed by the FBI and that he was being poisoned by his wife and daughter.

In 1967, Maury was diagnosed with schizophrenia. He was admitted to a mental institution, where he spent the rest of his life. He died in 1985 at the age of 59.

The story of Cimba Richard Maury is a complex and tragic one. He was a successful businessman and a loving father, but his life was forever changed by the death of his son. In the years that followed, Maury's mental health declined and he became increasingly estranged from his family and friends. Eventually, he was diagnosed with schizophrenia and spent the rest of his life in a mental institution.

Maury's story is a reminder that mental illness can strike anyone, regardless of their age, gender, or socioeconomic status. It is also a reminder that mental illness is a serious disease that requires treatment. If you or someone you know is struggling with mental illness, please seek help.
